DISSERTATION

Title: Meaning, Perception, and Knowledge: The Theory of Categories in Husserl (originally in French)

Graduation: Nov 20, 2010

Committee: Jocelyn BENOIST (Chair), Robert BRISART, Jean-François COURTINE (Advisor), Dominique PRADELLE

Abstract: I argue toward a novel approach to fundamental questions about the relations between language and perception and the description of conscious experiences. This new account is based on a revised understanding of Husserl's theory of knowledge and in particular his doctrine of categorial intuition, which formulates an original distinction between sensible and categorial forms. By re-drawing the traditional distinction between sensibility and understanding inherited from Kant, I show how Husserl achieves an important clarification of the impact of linguistic structures on perceptual knowledge and stress its significance with respect to the proper method of philosophy of mind. Along the way, I demonstrate the merits of Husserl's revision of the theory of categories itself, over and against other semantic, psychological and metaphysical theories.
